1. Explain the Dual Government system of British East India Company. Write a short note on the impact of Dual Government.

Dual Government system:

- Introduced in Bengal by Robert Clive in 1765, the Dual Government meant two separate authorities ruling Bengal: the British East India Company and the Nawab of Bengal.
- The Company exercised financial control (Diwani), while the Nawab retained nominal control over administrative functions (Nizamat).

Impact:

- The system led to the exploitation of Bengal's resources, as the British collected taxes but neglected the administration.
- This resulted in widespread corruption and mismanagement, contributing to the Great Bengal Famine of 1770.
- The Nawab’s reduced power further weakened local governance, with real control lying in British hands.

2. Describe elaborately about Partition of Bengal of 1905.

Partition of Bengal (1905):

- Lord Curzon, the then Viceroy of India, announced the partition of Bengal in 1905, dividing the province into East Bengal and West Bengal.
- The official reason was administrative efficiency, as Bengal was too large to govern effectively.
- However, the partition was seen as a political move to divide and weaken Bengal's nationalist sentiment, especially to break the unity between Hindus and Muslims.

Response:

- The partition faced massive opposition, especially from the Hindu population, who saw it as an attempt to "divide and rule."
- Movements such as the Swadeshi Movement emerged, advocating for the boycott of British goods and promoting Indian-made products.
- The partition was eventually annulled in 1911 due to widespread protests and pressure from Indian leaders.

3. Provide a detailed description about the significance and importance of Language Movement.

Language Movement (Bengali Language Movement):

- The movement emerged in the early 1950s in East Pakistan (now Bangladesh), demanding Bengali to be recognized as one of the state languages of Pakistan.
- After the creation of Pakistan in 1947, Urdu was declared the sole national language, disregarding Bengali, the mother tongue of the majority population in East Pakistan.

Importance:

- The movement symbolized the cultural and linguistic identity of the Bengali people.
- The protest led to mass uprisings, particularly on February 21, 1952, when several students were martyred by police firing while demonstrating for the recognition of Bengali.
- The movement was a precursor to the broader struggle for autonomy and eventually contributed to the independence of Bangladesh in 1971.
- Internationally, February 21 is now observed as International Mother Language Day by UNESCO, honoring linguistic and cultural diversity.

- The alliance was created to challenge the Muslim League, which had dominated politics since Pakistan's creation.

United Front Election as “Ballot Revelation”:

- In the 1954 provincial elections, the United Front achieved a landslide victory, winning 223 of the 237 seats in the East Bengal Legislative Assembly.
- This election is referred to as the "Ballot Revelation" because it revealed the deep dissatisfaction of the people with the ruling Muslim League and signaled a shift towards regional autonomy.
- The election also showed the growing political consciousness of the Bengali population, laying the groundwork for future movements leading to the creation of Bangladesh.
